 Introduction to the University

 The Thought of Establishing of the University

The idea of establishing the university dates back to 1993, when a group of professors from the National University of Somalia, others from international universities, and some prominent figures in the society sat together. The primary motivation behind the idea of establishing a none state university in the country, despite the difficult circumstances of the civil war, was to break the chains of despair and frustration and help students who had completed secondary studies and were unable to continue their education because of the civil war.

After intensive discussions in 1994, the participants reached the need to form a committee to study the subject and how to achieve this ambitious project.

On August 9, 1996, the committee presented its vision on the project, and it was discussed, and the participants decided to start implementing the plan and take all requirements from the preparation of the curricula, regulations and governing system of the university functions.

On September 22, 1997, Mogadishu University was opened officially, and embarked on the study of five significant faculties which are:
